JULY 22ND MEETING—4TH TUESDAY IN-PERSON

In-person only on the FOURTH Tuesday, July 22nd We are still working to figure out how and when we can work in on-line meetings. It's by far worth the extra effort to come in-person, but we recognize not everyone can.

THE BOYS AND GIRLS OF SUMMER

The boys and girls of summer

Are no longer in our sight,

Those sun kissed happy faces

now fill our dreams at night.

Long years ago they played and swam,
their laughter echoed along the lake,
fishing, camping and firelight talks, youthful dreams of the life they'd make.

Those boys and girls of summer
now swim on a distant shore,
the memory of their faces brings summer's joys to the fore.

Boys and girls of another time,
now crowd the sands at the lake,
laughing, splashing, in sun and spray,
unaware of hearts that watch and ache.

MARKING TIME

It seems we spend our whole lives "marking time". When we are born our parents mark the first twelve months until we reach the remarkable age of one year. They don't get excited again until they mark five years and then ten. For the rest of our lives we mark every five years and really celebrate every ten – our lives are measured one decade at a time. We refer to each of these birthdays as "milestones".

So it is natural then that we think of time as distance. The distance from birth to one year is certainly amazing. As are the changes that we experience as we grow and travel further away from our beginnings.

Marking time becomes even more pronounced after we have our own children. Only then do we recognize our own parents' delight in our milestones. As parents we begin to mark time by the changes in our children. Time is no longer a measure of you, it's a measure of them. After we lose a child, our lives become divided into two clearly defined parts – before and after. Marking time after such a loss becomes a method of measuring distance as well – but not as we've always understood it. Measuring time after losing a child becomes acute. More like "timestones" than "milestones".

During our first year as bereaved parents, while deeply in shock and disbelief, we mark all the firsts; the first week, the first month – the first birthday without them, the first Valentine's day, first Easter/Passover, first Spring, first Summer, first Halloween, first Thanksgiving, first Christmas/Chanukah – first New Year – crossing over into a year our child will never know – and then – approaching the first anniversary - their last Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday....

THE COMPASSIONATE FRIENDS MEETINGS are now monthly - in person on the third Tuesday of the month (4th Tuesday this month)

WE MEET AT 7:00pm—arrive or sign on at 6:45pm

This month, July 22, 2025, we will be meeting only in person at the

Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church

55th Street and Fifth Ave (enter at 7 West 55th St.)

The Compassionate Friends is a mutual assistance self-help organization offering friendship and understanding to bereaved parents, grandparents and siblings. We are a group seeking support in our grief or are able to give it. Among us your religion, your race, your politics, your job or social standing are not important. We care about your grief—the tragedy that each of us have shared—and how we can grow through it, not back to the person we were, but to the person we can become.

SUMMER THOUGHTS

Summer is a time when things naturally slow down, a time when many are waiting for the orderly routine of their lives to begin again. For those of us in grief whose lives are already in limbo, it can seem endless if we let it. Seeing children, babies and teenagers is not easy for us, and we see them everywhere from shopping centers to beaches. Everyone is out living, loving, enjoying care-free activities with their children, and we want to scream, "It's not fair!" I was sitting on my patio one evening at dusk recently listening to the shouts of children playing, and I was crying as I remembered the sounds that my child used to make. I became very depressed as I thought what a long summer this was going to be.

In my reverie, I was reminded of a recent comment that I had heard at a TCF meeting: "My child was such a loving, giving person. He would not want me to waste my life being bitter." "I also remember a good friend telling me to "count my blessings" and naming all the things I had to be grateful for. I was furious at that time. Nothing I had to be grateful for could compensate for the fact that my child had died. Now, sitting in the twilight of this early summer evening, I began to see things differently. I determined that this summer would not be an eternity: I would not let it be. I decided first of all to stay busy.

I am also going to try to enjoy the simple things that used to give me so much pleasure, like flowers, and working in my garden. I then decided to try to be truly grateful for the blessings that I have, like my husband, my friends, my job etc. It has been almost 5 years for me, and I know that last year this would not have worked. Of course I still have times of sadness; I know I always will. But I have decided that in the process of grieving we close so many doors, the only way to recovery is to reopen them gradually at our own pace.

I know I will never be the same person I was before the death of my child, but I hope eventually in some ways I will be a better person because suffering can be beneficial if we learn and grow through it. A year ago I didn't feel that way, and I know I still have a long way to go, but in the meantime, I know the greatest tribute to my child will be to enjoy this summer as he would have done.

~Libby Gonzales, TCF Huntsville, AL

Don't Think I Do Not Grieve

Don't think I do not feel; because you see no tears.
A river rages deep inside of grief, and loss, and fears.
Just because I do not cry now, don't think my heart's not broken.
I keep inside the misery of words not to be spoken.

Sometimes I smile, or crack a joke, so you won't see the pain;
or notice how my hands will shake, or how I've gone insane.
Each time I chance to think of her, my heart is ripped asunder.
The loss I feel is mine alone. you will not see my thunder.

~Brenda Penepent

For the rest of our lives, we mark time. The dreaded first anniversary that leads us to believe things will be different, that the pain will abate. Discovering that the intensity of marking all the firsts has been a distraction that now, in the second year the reality of absence is the major focus. They're really gone. We wonder if the despair will ever lift. We mark the second anniversary -the second "timestone".

Grief work consumes us. Then one day we realize there was a millisecond of thought that wasn't accompanied by the permanent reel running in our head. It is a beginning – another "timestone". We continue our struggle to survive and we do – marking each year until we have lived five years without our child's presence. Five years. Another "timestone".

We expected to be much further along after so much time. But it seems like only yesterday. Until you meet another bereaved parent who just landed here. Then you recognize the distance you've traveled -the time you've marked.

And so it will be for the rest of our lives. Learning to remember our kids with a smile and reaching all the timestones that await. The ten year mark, the twenty year mark...getting close and closer to our waiting children even as we continue to treasure their memories and continue to remind the world that they were here.

Ultimately we recognize how they enriched our lives, how much better we are for having had the joy of them. We are who we become because they lived and taught us a whole new dimension in loving. Coming to that realization is the ultimate "timestone".

Marie Levine, 2011

To Honor You

To honor you, I get up everyday and take a breath.

And start another day without you in it.

To honor you, I laugh and love with those who knew your smile and the way your eyes twinkled with mischief and secret knowledge.

To honor you, I take the time to appreciate everyone I love, I know now there is no guarantee of days or hours spent in their presence.

To honor you, I listen to music you would have liked, and sing at the top of my lungs, with the windows rolled down.

To honor you, I take chances, say what I feel, hold nothing back, risk making a fool of myself, dance every dance.

You were my light, my heart, my gift of love, from the very highest source.

So everyday, I vow to make a difference, share a smile, live, laugh and love.

Now I live for us both, so all I do, I do to honor you.

A BROTHER'S DEATH

By Barbara Lazaar Ascher

Barbara Lazaar Ascher's brother Bobby died of AIDS at the age of 31. Following is an excerpt of a beautifully written and sensitive article describing the author's struggle with grief. In an almost poetic style, she brings to life the chaos of grief. "A Brother's Death" was originally printed in the NY Times magazine.

When we first learned of Bobby's illness, it seemed incomprehensible that this could be happening to our baby brother. There were days when it seemed we had to concentrate on putting one foot in front of the other if we were to walk at all. If we traveled more than a couple of blocks, we were exhausted for the rest of the day.

We were hungry. We weren't hungry. We made chocolate chip cookies and brownies and didn't eat them. We opened and closed the refrigerator door, looking for something that might cushion the pain, fill the chasm that was opening from within.

Now I realize that this was the beginning of grief which starts in the stomach, yawning like a gaping mouth in Munch's painting "The Scream". But what did we know of grief? We were young; our beloveds had not yet died. I began to understand that grieving is like walking. The urge is there, but you need a guiding hand, you need someone to teach you how.

I went to speak to a wise and trusted minister at my church who warned there were bad times ahead. The death of a sibling, he said, grievous in itself, is also a startling reminder of our own mortality. I suppose it's no dissimilar to the time in youth when we first learned of our origins and began to understand, if they made me, then they can make another. After that we became the nervous sentinels of our territory. When a sibling dies, the absolute certainty of death replaces the cherished illusion that maybe we'll be exceptions. When a sibling dies, death tugs at our own shirttails. There is no unclasping its persistent grip. "You too", it says. "Yes, even you".

When you are new to grief, you learn there is no second-guessing it. It will have its way with you. Don't be fooled by statistics you read: Widows have one bad year; orphans three. Grief doesn't read schedules.

One morning, three weeks after Bobby died, I arose feeling happy and energetic. Well now, I thought, I guess we've taken care of that. Wrong. The next morning I was awakened by a wail I thought was coming from the storm outside until I realized it was coming from me.

Grief will fool you with its disguises. Some days you insist you're fine, you're just angry at a friend who said the wrong thing. One day I wept into the lettuce and peaches at a local market when an acquaintance approached to scold me for my stand in an old battle. Of course, we both assumed she was responsible for my tears.

You learn that you can cry and stop and laugh and even follow a taxi driver's command to "have a nice day", and then cry again. You learn there is no such thing as crying forever. Three months ago I was certain I would never be happy again. I was wrong.

Grief is like the wind. When it is blowing hard you adjust your sails and run before it. If it blows too hard, you stay in the harbor, close the hatches and don't take calls. When it's gentle, you go sailing, have a picnic, take a swim.

The Compassionate Friends Sibling Credo

*We are the surviving siblings of The Compassionate Friends
We are brought together by the deaths of our brothers and sisters*

Open your hearts to us, but have patience with us.

Sometimes we need our families to be there.

Sometimes we must walk alone, taking our memories with us, to become the individuals we want to be.

We cannot be our dead brother or sister; however a special part of them lives on with us.

When our brothers and sisters died, our lives changed.

We are living a life very different from what we envisioned and we feel a responsibility to be strong even when we feel weak.

Yet we can go on because we understand better than many the value of family and the precious gift of life.

Our goal is not to be the forgotten mourners that we are, but to walk together to face tomorrow as the surviving siblings of The Compassionate Friends.

Centering Corporation is a provider of resources for those grieving and publishes books on the loss of a child, grand-child, sibling, infant and miscarriage. For a catalog go to www.centering.org. Some examples:

Healing a Parents Grieving Heart – 100 practical ideas after your child dies by Alan Wolfelt, helps parents understand and reconcile grief. Covers common challenges such as dealing with marital stress, helping surviving siblings dealing with hurtful advice and exploring feelings of guilt.

Into the Valley and Out Again – The story of a Fathers Journey by Rich Edler. After the unexpected death of his son, Rich's life seemed to stop. It is a man's story about what is important in life, sorrow, faith, acceptance and rebirth.

For Bereaved Grandparents – by Margaret Gerner, this gentle resource addresses the issues grandparent are faced with when experiencing this double grief – helping your grieving child, what you can do, grandfathers, holidays and deeper relationships.

Suicide Survivors Handbook – A Guide for the Bereaved and Those Who Wish To Help Them by Trudy Carlson who wrote this book after the death of her son, Ben, to Suicide. The book answers what every parent wants to know, and also covers the shame and guilt and the anger associated with losing a loved one.

"If you love me let me go"

~ Source unknown

I don't know to whom to ascribe this quotation. It came to me as a variant of a current popular song several months after my daughter's death. It has been my experience over several years that the songs that go through my head are usually telling me something. In this case the tune was for a song with which I was only marginally familiar. "If you love me let me know." But for me the words were, "If you love me let me go."

If there is a way, which some have suggested, that the spirits of the dead continue to hover close until they see we are going to be all right, until they feel freed to go, then perhaps, through some flash implant in my spirit, my daughter was telling me something. At the time, I thought of the message in these terms.

It is all conjecture of course, and who knows whether we are projecting our own needs in these images of What Happens Next or whether we are intuitively onto some truth?

But from whatever source, with whatever corroboration or lack of it, this was a good message for me to hear just then.

Reading other bereaved people's stories helps us. Take advantage of these resources. Discovering how much of what we feel is being experienced by fellow travelers helps us understand the process and restores hope.

...to our new members

Attending your first meeting is the hardest thing to do. But you have nothing to lose and everything to gain. Try not to judge your first meeting as to whether or not TCF will work for you. Often, it is the second, third or fourth meeting where you will find just the right person or the right words said that will help you along in your grief.

...to our long standing members

We need your encouragement and continued support. You are what ties our group together. Sadly, each meeting brings new parents. THINK BACK... what would it have been like for you if there had not been any "oldtimers" to welcome you and share your grief and encourage you and tell you that in time, the pain will soften...with time, there is hope.

The Compassionate Friends Credo

We need not walk alone.

We are The Compassionate Friends.

We reach out to each other with love, with understanding, and with hope.

Our children have died at all ages and from many different causes, but our love for our children unites us.

Your pain becomes my pain just as your hope becomes my hope.

We come together from all walks of life, from many different circumstances.

We are a unique family because we represent many races and creeds.

We are young and we are old.

Some of us are far along in our grief, but others still feel a grief so fresh, and so intensely painful that we feel helpless and see no hope.

Some of us have found our faith to be a source of strength; some of us are struggling to find answers.

Some of us are angry, filled with guilt or deep depression; others radiate an inner peace.

It is pain we will share just as we share the love for our children.

We are all seeking and struggling to build a future for ourselves, but we are committed to building a future together as we reach out to each other in love, and share the pain as well as the joy, share the anger as well as the peace,

share the faith as well as the doubts, and help each other to grieve, as well as to grow.

WE NEED NOT WALK ALONE.

WE ARE THE COMPASSIONATE FRIENDS.

Online Support from the National Compassionate Friends Website

Live Chats

The Compassionate Friends offers "virtual chapters" through an Online Support Community (live chats). This program was established to encourage connecting and sharing among parents, grandparents, and siblings (over the age of 18) grieving the death of a child. The rooms supply support, encouragement, and friendship. The friendly atmosphere encourages conversation among friends; friends who understand the emotions you're experiencing. There are general bereavement sessions as well as more specific sessions.

Our Children Remembrances — Changes

A longstanding tradition in our Manhattan Chapter of Compassionate Friends newsletter has been the listing of our children's and sibling's birthdays and anniversaries. I know I look first at each issue of the newsletter to see my child's listing, my sister's listing, and scan for the birthdays and anniversaries of my TCF friends' loved ones.

It is very important that our listings are correct and meaningful and we try to keep the listings as accurate and up to date as possible, but we are not perfect. Should you desire a change to your loved one's listing or if your listing is missing, please let us know. Email to tcfmanhattan.nyc@gmail.com and tell us what needs to change.
