Still here...

"...it is Peter who has made me what I am. I can't thank you enough for teaching me that Peter continues to be the biggest, most important part of my life. Thank you for letting me share him with you and thank you all for sharing your children with me. Everything I do today is because Peter lived. Thank you for giving me a place where I'll always be Peter's Mom."

With those words I accepted my Chapter Leadership Award at the TCF National Conference in California in 2012. I left the stage to many hoots and hollers and warm hugs all around. It was a really heartwarming moment for me. It's now been 29 years since I found TCF and it is amazing to me that I am still here, that I function as well as I do and that I continue to find joy in my life. All seemingly impossible outcomes so many years ago.

On this incredible journey, I've often written about where I've found myself along the way. In the early years I wrote about the pain, the longing, the need to matter, the hopelessness, the disappointment, the confusion, the despair – my personal experience. As the years went on, I discovered hope had returned in my writing, and many of my fellow travelers said they found validation there because they too were experiencing the same feelings I related in my columns.

I stopped feeling guilt about enjoying what I could of my life. I acknowledged that Peter would have wanted me to make the most of the time I have here. I discovered that his presence wasn't fading as I had feared in the beginning. He had instead, become the very reason I felt compelled to do so much of what I was doing.

Because Peter died, I discovered a pain that no one had

Why? – NOT!!!

We have just commemorated the fifth anniversary of the death of my son. A half a decade has passed since I have looked at David's face or heard his laugh. When I learned of his death, I did not think I could survive five minutes. Yet five years have come and gone, and I remain here. The sheer incomprehensibility, the absolute impossibility, the overwhelming irrationality of the fact that he is no longer part of my family is as puzzling now as it was all those seasons ago.

I think the tall, slim young man with the loosely tied, plaid scarf who is crossing my path is he. At night, while in that liminal space poised between sleep and wakefulness, he morphs before me, greeting me with his unique, crooked smile, telling me he is fine and that I worry too much. I read a book he would enjoy, and I am about to email it title to him. On his birthday, I am totally unhinged by a stubborn fantasy that I will be celebrating, not mourning. Can he really be dead? And can I still be imagining that he really is not, and am I having an especially long, harrowing nightmare that will eventually end?

I am older, sadder, but not wiser. Not that I don't try to discover some transcendent wisdom, find explanations, garner insight, cultivate a spiritual outlook. I just can't seem to wrap my head around the awfulness of my child's fate. This painful and (I know in my head but not my heart) pointless mulling is inevitably followed by my own rehashing of the past and how I might have been able to change the tragic course of events. The could have, would have, should and should not haves continue to haunt me.

The death of a child is not an unfortunate event, its impact fading over time. Perhaps the most unwelcome comment grieving parents hear is the surprised expressions by those who muse, you're still not over it? one, ten or twenty years after their loss. The truth is, that since my son died, he looms larger than life in my consciousness. I am always missing him, and the sense of

The Compassionate Friends is a mutual assistance self-help organization offering friendship and understanding to bereaved parents, grandparents and siblings. We are a group seeking support in our grief or are able to give it. Among us your religion, your race, your politics, your job or social standing are not important. We care about your grief—the tragedy that each of us have shared—and how we can grow through it, not back to the person we were, but to the person we can become.

ever been able to describe. It literally took my breath away. It changed everything I knew. It changed the way I saw the world. It changed my whole life. Surviving the loss of my precious only child changed who I am. Everything I thought I knew became unimportant. Learning how to breathe again – the very act of breathing – was the beginning of my new life. The sense of despair and hopelessness was so bewildering and inexplicable I was sure my mind had simply imploded.

I have never forgotten that early sensibility. And because the memory is so vivid, I cannot help but reach out to those who have come after me – reaching out, being there for the newly bereaved, figuring out how to let the unknowing learn about TCF and how hope lives here - those activities have been the most healing for me.

Though most travelers eventually learn to reinvent themselves and move on into their newly designed lives complete with the memories of their lost children – many of us choose to stay connected to The Compassionate Friends. And although I hesitate to confess to those who join a meeting for the first time, that I have been here for 29 years for fear of scaring them into proclaiming that they won't still be grieving after 29 years – I know ultimately they will learn that I am no longer grieving the loss of Peter, but acknowledging the impact he has had on my life.

Because of my affiliation with TCF, the support I've given and the support I have received, Peter is ever present in my life. The time spent with TCF is Peter time. Though he is physically gone, I am still here, keeping him present in a world that should have been his. That final stage of grief is internal and forever. And after all these years I'm surer than ever that it is Peter who continues to have the greatest effect on me – and one day, when we meet again, we're going to have so much to talk about!

“missing-ness” has become part of my new and diminished identity. My emotional armor has been pierced, compromising my coping skills and leaving me vulnerable to mood swings. One minute I am numb and listless, the next, volatile and frenetic. I am prone to obsessive thinking, endlessly searching for a way to make sense of something that never will.

I have come to accept that I may not be able to stop unanswerable questions of cosmic injustice from sneaking into my psyche, but I also realize that I do not have to invite them in and feed them a meal. I can respond to these compulsive ruminations in the only way possible – ignore them. Why? they torment mercilessly. Not! I reply, ending the discussion before it begins.

Our children

Grief that lasts forever
Empty spaces everywhere
Holes in our hearts
They are missing gone
Painfully hard holidays
Empty seat at our tables
Life has to change and will become richer
In this deep place of love, joy will emerge
We'll love deeper still
Music is heard
Risks are taken
Courage is prayed for Change we must
Life should be loved
We will become richer fuller vibrant
Light will return
Taking nothing for granted
Live with both joy and despair
Finally saying
Thank you to
Our sweet children
Our most precious gifts

There Is No Word

*They call a man a widower
when he has lost his wife.
The woman is a widow
when her man does lose his life.
And orphan is the word perhaps for most of us one day,
for it is normal losing
Mom and Dad along the way.
But you can look both high and low and then look far and wide and never find a word for one who's had a child who died.*

*So is it then so rare to find for lexicography?
And, like some unfound jungle plant,
there's yet no word for me?
Or could it be a word that's just too difficult to choose.
And, God forbid, a nightmare curse,
too horrible to use?
So, at a loss to tell our loss,
we call ourselves bereaved,
for there's no word to tell of pain that cannot be believed.*

...to our new members

Attending your first meeting is the hardest thing to do. But you have nothing to lose and everything to gain. Try not to judge your first meeting as to whether or not TCF will work for you. Often, it is the second, third or fourth meeting where you will find just the right person or the right words said that will help you along in your grief.

...to our long standing members

We need your encouragement and continued support. You are what ties our group together. Sadly, each meeting brings new parents. THINK BACK... what would it have been like for you if there had not been any “oldtimers” to welcome you and share your grief and encourage you and tell you that in time, the pain will soften...with time, there is hope.

The Compassionate Friends Credo

*We need not walk alone.
We are The Compassionate Friends.
We reach out to each other with love, with understanding, and with hope.*

*Our children have died at all ages and from many different causes, but our love for our children unites us.
Your pain becomes my pain just as your hope becomes my hope.*

We come together from all walks of life, from many different circumstances.

We are a unique family because we represent many races and creeds.

We are young and we are old.

Some of us are far along in our grief, but others still feel a grief so fresh, and so intensely painful that we feel helpless and see no hope.

*Some of us have found our faith to be a source of strength;
some of us are struggling to find answers.*

*Some of us are angry, filled with guilt or deep depression;
others radiate an inner peace.*

It is pain we will share just as we share the love for our children.

We are all seeking and struggling to build a future for ourselves, but we are committed to building a future together as we reach out to each other in love, and share the pain as well as the joy,

share the anger as well as the peace,

share the faith as well as the doubts,

and help each other to grieve, as well as to grow.

WE NEED NOT WALK ALONE.

WE ARE THE COMPASSIONATE FRIENDS.

Online Support from the National Compassionate Friends Website

Live Chats

The Compassionate Friends offers “virtual chapters” through an Online Support Community (live chats). This program was established to encourage connecting and sharing among parents, grandparents, and siblings (over the age of 18) grieving the death of a child. The rooms supply support, encouragement, and friendship. The friendly atmosphere encourages conversation among friends; friends who understand the emotions you’re experiencing. There are general bereavement sessions as well as more specific sessions.

Click HERE for more information and a list and schedule of Live Chats.

Private Facebook Groups

The Compassionate Friends offers a variety of Private Facebook Groups. These pages cover a wide range of topics and are moderated by bereaved parents, siblings, or grandparents. They may accessed only after a request to join is approved by a moderator.

Do Not Stand at My Grave and Weep

Do not stand at my grave and weep,
I am not there; I do not sleep.
I am a thousand winds that blow,
I am the diamond glints on snow,
I am the sun on ripened grain,
I am the gentle autumn rain.
When you awaken in the morning's hush
I am the swift uplifting rush
Of quiet birds in circling flight.
I am the soft star-shine at night.
Do not stand at my grave and cry,
I am not there; I did not die.

The poem, an elegy, is sometimes called "I Am" due to its repetition of the biblical phrase. Was the poem inspired? The Hebrew name for God, YHWH, means "I am" or "I am that I am." And there does seem to be something magical about the poem, as it was written by a woman who, to our knowledge, had never written a poem before. Mary Elizabeth Frye was an orphan with no formal education. In 1932 she and her husband hosted a young Jewish woman, Margaret Schwarzkopf, who was fleeing the Holocaust. When she received news that her mother had died in Germany, the heartbroken houseguest told Frye in despair that she had never had the chance to "stand by my mother's grave and shed a tear." Frye found herself composing the poem above on a ripped-off section of a brown paper shopping bag. She said the words "just came to her."

by Mary Elizabeth Frye

DO YOU KNOW WHO I AM?

I am flesh and blood, torn mind, and broken heart.
I feel at times like a wise old woman – but then, in the next moment like a small child.

I admit total confusion. I look in the mirror and see someone I'm not sure I know. I want an answer; I want a solution – to a problem that has neither on this earth.

It seems that nothing matters anymore and yet at the same time I have learned that everything does. That there are billions of people on this earth. When one of them dies, it matters.

I ache to a degree that only another who has crossed this bridge could gauge. And only they can for a moment understand my torment.

Do you know who I am?

I am a bereaved mother – the last thing I ever thought I would be. My child has died before me, the most unnatural thing in the world. And my continued being seems the next most unnatural thing in the world.

A portion of my heart, spirit, and dreams – and all thoughts of total peace, are with Ryan, never to be recovered to make a whole until I see him again.

The tears I cry are not for me, but for the beautiful life that ended far too soon. And the utterly helpless frustration of not being able to do anything to change that.

Gifts of Love

A Love Gift is a donation given in memory of a child who has died, or sometimes a memorial to a relative or friend. It can be in honor of a happy event that you would like to acknowledge, or simply a gift from someone who wants to help in the work of our chapter.

All TCF chapters are totally dependent on funds from our families. We DO NOT receive funds from our National Office. Everything we need to operate our local chapters is paid directly from our local resources and our local family contributions. Thank you to all who can contribute and support this chapter. Please see 'Making a Contribution' below:

Passing the Basket – During normal times, we raise needed funds at each meeting by passing a basket for voluntary contributions. In this time without in person meetings, the Manhattan Chapter is going without the resources we usually get from the basket passed during our meetings. We are so glad to be able to hold the online meetings, and if you are able to, once a month or whenever you can, please help and make a 'Basket' contribution to help our organization.

Siblings

Re-entering school after the death of a sibling

Going back to school after the death of your brother or sister is a hard thing to go through. At first there are three groups of people to deal with; people who give you a lot of support, people who don't know what to say, and those who give you weird looks and stay away from you. This lasts for a little while. After a short time, changes with each group occur.

Those who didn't know what to say start to speak or begin to talk. The group who kept away stop ignoring you. The people who gave you a lot of support, slowly return to their own affairs. After about a month and a half, everything goes back to normal and is over to everyone but you. This is very difficult to accept and makes you feel all the more alone.

After a while the shock for you goes away and it is then that you need the support from your friends, peers, and teachers. This month is the first anniversary of the death of my brother. Most people will have forgotten and everything is right with the world. But it is not! Certainly not to my mother and me.

~ Jordan Ely, TCF, Albany/Delmar, NY

*****

Dear Ann Landers:

As a bereaved sibling, I was disappointed in your response to "Anonymous in Raleigh, NC", who asked whether it would be appropriate to send her parents a card on the anniversary of her brother's death. You advised her not to send a card, but to take her parents to dinner, "with no mention of the sad anniversary."

Bereaved parents will tell you that the one thing they want to do is talk about their child. Ignoring the anniversary of a child's death is the same as ignoring the child's birthday: it makes bereaved parents feel as though their child didn't exist. Many bereaved parents have told me that their surviving children will not talk about their brother or sister who has died. Often this is because they are afraid of upsetting their parents. However, bereaved parents yearn to hear their children mention the dead child's name. "Anonymous" should be encouraged in her efforts to remember the anniversary of her brother's death by sending a card to her parents.

On the anniversary of my brother's death, I send a special card to my parents to tell them I am thinking about them and remembering my brother. We open our hearts to each other and share our memories of him and how much we miss him. We also put flowers on his grave that day and have flowers on the church altar in his memory on the Sunday closest to the anniversary of his death. In other words, the day is not like any other day. My life and my parents' lives changed forever the day he died. Making no mention of it would only be another tragedy.

It's A Family Affair

When a child dies, grief is a family affair. It hits Mom, Dad and siblings with equal despair. Mom cries and cannot get out of bed. Dad holds in emotions and leaves much unsaid. Sisters and brothers simply cannot understand why death came and dealt this kind of hand. No one acts as they should, and nothing is the same. The family wants to draw together but seems to share only pain. Someone must be responsible when a child dies. Each family member thinks in some way its them, and cries. But no one is responsible for things we cannot control, so reach out to each other and keep the family whole. Don't let the difference in how you each grieve. change the love in your family or what you believe. Be strong when you can and weak when you must. And love each other with kindness and trust.

Keep the family with love and you all will survive. For we who have been there and made it through together, can say that holding on to each other makes love last forever.

The Compassionate Friends Sibling Credo

We are the surviving siblings of The Compassionate Friends
We are brought together by the deaths of our brothers and sisters

Open your hearts to us, but have patience with us.

Sometimes we need our families to be there.

Sometimes we must walk alone, taking our memories with us, to become the individuals we want to be.

We cannot be our dead brother or sister; however a special part of them lives on with us.

When our brothers and sisters died, our lives changed.

We are living a life very different from what we envisioned and we feel a responsibility to be strong even when we feel weak.

Yet we can go on because we understand better than many the value of family and the precious gift of life.

Our goal is not to be the forgotten mourners that we are, but to walk together to face tomorrow as the surviving siblings of The Compassionate Friends.

Our Children Remembrances — Changes

A longstanding tradition in our Manhattan Chapter of Compassionate Friends newsletter has been the listing of our children's and sibling's birthdays and anniversaries. I know I look first at each issue of the newsletter to see my child's listing, my sister's listing, and scan for the birthdays and anniversaries of my TCF friends loved ones.

It is very important that our listings are correct and meaningful and we try to keep the listings as accurate and up to date as possible, but we are not perfect. Should you desire a change to your loved one's listing or if your listing is missing, please let us know. Email to tcfmanhattan.nyc@gmail.com and tell us what needs to change.
